DRUNKEN WOMAN.

Used A Revolver With Deadly Effect.

Two Men Killed And One Mortally Wounded.

Musicians Refused To Play Rag-Time
For Her.

Montgomery, West Virginia, Jan. 19.—William Slaughter and Ralph Johnson, colored musicians, were shot and instantly killed and Howell Calloway, white, was mortally wounded at Morris Creek, at midnight. Lillian Williams, it was used the revolver with such deadly result. The scene of the tragedy was at a dance in the heart of the mining region. About midnight the Williams woman entered the hall, considerably under the influence of liquor. She commanded the musicians to play some rag-time music, and play it quick. When her demand was not complied with she whipped a revolver out from under her wrap and began firing. Calloway was an onlooker, and one of the bullets intended for a musician penetrated his breast. The murderers escaped lynching only by the timely arrival of the officers.

BRUTALLY MURDERED.

A Dealer in Diamonds and Jewelry
Killed By Burglars.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Bela Brown, sixty-five years old, a dealer in diamonds and manufacturer of jewelry, was found brutally murdered in his store on State street at 8:15 o'clock tonight by Night Watchman John Racquet while making his accustomed rounds. Brown's legs were tied together and he was gagged with a long red neck scarf. The body rested on a chair in front of the safe and was leaning over so that the head rested on a small chest of drawers. At the back of the head was a hole extending into the brain and about it were several gashes in the scalp evidently made by a bloody hammer which was found near by. Evidence pointed to a fierce struggle, but no positive clue to the murderer has been found.

Kills Sixty Persons and Injuries Over One Hundred.

Barcelona, Spain, Jan. 19.—An explosion of the boiler of the spinning mill, on Saturday, near Manresa, destroyed one-half of the village of Puen-te Vilumara. It is now estimated that sixty persons were killed and one hundred injured. The dead included many children. Of the injured thirty are not expected to recover. The queen regent has wired her condolences. The boiler exploded in the evening when the mill hands, many of whom were accompanied by their wives and children, were eating supper before commencing their night's work. The buildings collapsed entirely and the debris was wanted in all directions, destroying other buildings and killing and injuring the people in the vicinity.

DIAMOND ROBBERY.

cure Much Plunder.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 19.—A special from Glendive says that robbers have secured between ten and twenty thousand dollars worth of unset and set diamonds by stealing two trunks from the baggage room of the North Pacific station and breaking them open. Nothing is missing from the trunks excepting a tray of unset diamonds and three four hundred rings. The trunks were the property of C. B. Clausen a traveling jewelry salesman from Minneapolis.

TWICE IN A WEEK.

Liquor Deputies Raided A Plaistow
Hotel A Second Time In Seven Days.

Exeter, Jan. 19.—Friday evening a posse of police raided the St. James house in Plaistow, just over the state line, and seized twelve bottles of beer, a bottle of champagne and three quarts of liquors. Fred C. Boles, the alleged proprietor of the place, was arrested. Saturday morning Boles was arraigned before Judge John H. Noyes in Plaistow and on two counts was held for the grand jury in $1,200 bonds. He was fined $10 and costs for keeping beer and on appeal was held in $400 bonds. On the spirituous liquor keeping charge he was held in $800 bonds. A week ago the place was raided and in court Boles was held under $400 bonds for the grand jury. Chief Dobbins objected to Moses Dow and Albert Wood, who furnished bonds, serving as bondsmen on the two new charges, and as Boles was unable to secure other bail he was taken to jail here yesterday afternoon.

FOUR BUILDINGS COLLAPSE.

Without Any Apparent Cause They Fall Into Ruins.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 19.—Four buildings, each four stories high, in the heart of the wholesale district, collapsed at 8:30 o'clock tonight without any apparent cause, and are now a heap of ruins. The buildings were part of a block bounded by Jefferson avenue and Shelby and Griswold streets, and occupied by five concerns. The stock is a total loss and estimated at $152,000, exclusive of loss on buildings which will be $75,000 more. There are evidences of an explosion about the ruins, but no one seems to have heard it.

AN ITALIAN MOB.

Prevents The Internment of A Small Pox Victim.

Easton, Pa., Jan. 19.—A serious riot following an attempt on the part of the health board to bury the body of an Italian woman who died of malignant small pox occurred at Bangor this afternoon. Four hundred Italians attacked the police and probably fatally injured Peter Russ, and prevented the internment. The woman's corpse now lies in the Catholic church closely guarded. The sheriff will send a posse to Bangor to disperse the mob.

It perfects all the vital processes.

W. P. Keeton, Woodstock, Ala., took Hood's writes that he had not felt well but tried for some time. Before he had finished the first

DOVER CLOSED TIGHT.

W. C. T. U. Opens Men's Coffee Room
And Is Well Patronized.

Dover, Jan. 19.—City Marshal Fogarty's order to stop the sale of liquor in the city appears to have been completely effective. A liquor squad made a tour of inspection last night, but no illegal business was discovered. The W. C. T. U. opened a men's coffee room and dispensed free coffee. It was well patronized. For the past two days the city has been flooded with circulars and price lists of Boston wholesale liquor houses. Many persons here have taken advantage of Rochester's remaining a wide-open town, and the travel to that city was heavy last night. The Salmon Falls dealers closed their places at noon yesterday by order of the selectmen.

Mr. Leichmann declines to say anything for publication in connection with this matter, but he admits that there is ground for the above report.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 19.—While Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Whittaker were out calling this evening they left their baby with a domestic, and when they returned the nurse was found up stairs in an unconscious condition from asphyxiation. She had turned on the gas and inhaled it. Later the infant was found hanging to a gas pipe in the cellar. The doctor says the woman cannot live and the story of the double tragedy will probably never be known.

AN OLD CRIME REVIEWED.

Mrs. Barrows This Week Will be Heard for Pardon.

How She, With Oscar Blaney, Planned
Her Husband's Death.

How the Cold Blooded Shooting Was Done by Blaney.

At the meeting of Governor Hill and his council in Augusta next Friday there will be a hearing on the petition of Mrs. Mary E. Barrows for a commutation of the life sentence under which she is now confined in the state prison at Thomaston for the murder of her husband in 1883. Tried and convicted of murder in the first degree at the January term of the supreme court in Saco in 1884, Mrs. Barrows was sentenced to be hung. This sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life by Governor Bodwell, however, and next September the woman will have served eighteen years of her life behind bars and bars. At the expiration of that period she desires to be set free and it is this question which the governor and his associates in the council will consider on January 21.

In anticipation of the hearing a review of the circumstances in connection with the murder will be of interest not only to those whose memories go back to the time it was committed, but also to persons of a younger generation, who, at the time were not old enough to take cognizance of the details of a happening that stirred the whole of York county as it perhaps has never been stirred since by one human being taking the life of another.

At about 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, November 14, 1883, Thomas Barrows of Kittery, while on his way from his home to his barn was shot down in cold blood and left for dead. Whether it was a case of murder or suicide was for a few days an unsettled question. At first the only person who appeared to have any knowledge of the particulars of the terrible deed was the wife of the murdered man, Mary E. Barrows. Substantially, her story was that the murder was committed out of doors near the barn. Hearing a shot she stepped to the window of a bedroom overlooking the spot and was just in time to see him fall as a second shot rang out on the evening air.

As soon as he fell, Mrs. Barrows said, her husband began to crawl on his hands and knees in the endeavor to get back into the house. She watched him for a few seconds and then fled through the front door to the home of her son-in-law, Oscar E. Blaney, two miles distant. He was the first person, she said, that she told of the crime and immediately hitching up his team Blaney drove with her to the scene. Reaching the place they entered the house and found that Mr. Barrows had dragged himself into a bedroom where he had expired on the bed. Neighbors were then summoned and the coroner sent for.

The contradictory statements of Mrs. Barrows and the unimpeachable manner in which she spoke of her murdered husband caused many to doubt the truth of her story. A careful examination of the ground where Mr. Barrows was said to have been shot and the path between that point and the house failed to show a drop of blood that flowed from his wounds, while the bed on which he died was found to be saturated with it. When the coroner arrived the body had been untouched. It lay upon the right side with the left arm raised so that the head reclined on the hand, while the feet hung over the side of the bed. All the wounds were upon the left, or uppermost, side and their infliction was such as would have been made by a person standing behind and near the foot of that bed. When the hand was removed from under the head it was covered with perspiration. The body was also warm and limp, although according to Mrs. Barrows' story, the shooting took place four hours previously.

The revolver with which the shooting was first presumed to have been done was found close by the point where Mr. Barrows was said to have fallen at the second shot between the barn and the house. Mrs. Barrows' theory of the deed had been suicide in a fit of temporary insanity. The revolver disproved this, however, for it contained only five barrels while altogether six shots were found in the body of the murdered man. This, and other circumstances, led to an investigation by County Attorney F. M. Higgins of Limerick, Sheriff Getchell of Wells and Deputy Sheriff Dana S. Beacham of Limerick.

Suspicion immediately fastened itself upon Mrs. Barrows and her son-in-law, Blaney. As soon as they knew that they were suspected they told new stories, all of them at variance with known facts. Mrs. Barrows soon got thoroughly frightened and said that her husband died on the lounge in the kitchen and that she and Blaney carried him to the bed where he was found by the coroner. After the body of Barrows had been exhumed and a post mortem performed Mrs. Barrows and Blaney were arrested, she being charged as an accessory and he with deliberately shooting her husband.

Under prolonged and searching examination by detectives, Mrs. Barrows told a story which, when Blaney was confronted with it, caused him to break down and make a confession. In the presence of authorities, closely questioning him, Blaney narrated the circumstances leading up to the crime and the details of its commission. After relating a story of family troubles he said that he had brooded so long upon the evident desire of Mrs. Barrows to be rid of her husband that he had determined to put him out of the way.

With this object in view the Saturday previous to the murder he went to Dover, N. H., where he purchased a revolver. It was a five chambered weapon, .38 caliber. With a revolver he obtained a single cartridge. That night on his return from Dover he secured six more cartridges, making seven in all. The night of the murder Blaney, after doing the chores at his home, put the revolver, loaded with five cartridges, into his pocket and walked along slowly towards the house of his intended victim. On the way he discharged one cartridge to see if the revolver worked well. Satisfied that it would not fall him he walked on and reached the Barrows place about 8:25 o'clock and took a position under the shed adjoining the barn. Here he lay in wait for Barrows. He was not kept in suspense long for within ten minutes Barrows came out of the house and started towards the barn. In one hand he carried a lantern. When he approached to within a dozen feet of Blaney the latter opened fire on him. Barrows dropped the lantern, the light went out, and Blaney, frightened in the dark, dropped the revolver, ran around to the rear of the barn and took the road for home.

Mrs. Barrows, hearing the report of the revolver, soon afterwards followed Blaney to his home and induced him to return again to the farm. When they reached the house Blaney hastened to the shed and groped about until he found the revolver. He then went into the house, where he found Barrows in the bedroom, sitting on the edge of the bed groaning with pain. Perceiving his son-in-law, the injured man exclaimed: "Oscar, I have got to go soon, I think."

"Yes," said Blaney, in a firm voice, "your time has come now." With this Blaney again opened fire on the man. The shot took effect in the hip, shattering the bone and making a ghastly wound. The injured man groaned deeply and raised his arm to his head as if to shield his face. Blaney then fired a second shot, which buried itself in Barrows' brain and he fell back on the bed without a groan. Blaney then threw the revolver under the shed again and he and Mrs. Barrows then gave the alarm that the man had committed suicide.

Blaney and Mrs. Barrows were indicted for murder by the grand jury and tried at the January term of the supreme court following the crime in November.

The contention of the state in advancing a motive to connect Mrs. Barrows with the crime was hatred of her husband. After a trial lasting a week it was proved beyond a doubt that Blaney was only the supple tool on her determination to get rid of her husband that that he was induced to do the shooting through her influence. The jury found her guilty of murder in the first degree after being out a little less than four hours. After the conviction of Mrs. Barrows, Blaney pleaded guilty. At the following September court both prisoners were sentenced to be hung, but these decrees were commuted to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Barrows has now served nearly eighteen years, while Blaney committed suicide in his cell several years ago.

AN EFFICIENT HEAD OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

The Hon. John D. Long Has Had A Proud Record As The Secretary Of The Navy Of The United States.

HON. JOHN D. LONG.

There is a possibility, according to persistent reports, that the Hon. John D. Long will soon retire from the head of the navy department. That he will do so is regretted most heartily by one end of the country to the other. He has occupied the position during one of the most conspicuous periods of American naval history and it is due to his superior intellect and deep insight into the devious conditions of the times, that the navy and the department of its management occupy the proud and credited consideration of the entire world that it does at this time.

If there was ever a man that has conducted his public services above criticism, dealt wisely in the administration of his duties and held the confidence of a great country in more than one trying incident, such a man is Mr. Long. For patriotism, clear-headedness and executive ability, he is a brilliant example of the men who preside over the important branches of our national life and he is entitled to all the honor that an appreciative country is able to bestow.

The war with a foreign country, the dissensions that have arisen in the service over which Mr. Long presided and the progress that has been made in our naval development have shown Mr. Long to be a courageous and impartial man and a firm friend of our best interests in everything wherein he has acted.

Those who have intelligently followed the course of events since the first inauguration of the lamented Mr. McKinley will approve most sincerely of Mr. Long's service to his fellow men in his conduct of all that has transpired in his department. He has well contributed his share toward the wiping out of a cruel empire's interests in a now free island; he has been a kind and thoughtful referee in as far as his province allowed, in a bitter controversy and has earned the respect of those connected on both sides, and he has been a prudent, learned promoter of the naval welfare in every instance.

These sentiments and facts will become more apparent as time goes on, and if Mr. Long does retire to private life for a needed rest, he will do so with the best wishes of a grateful nation which appreciates all that he has contributed towards the success of the best navy that floats today.

It is well-known that President Roosevelt desires Mr. Long to continue in the cabinet and continue his services in the department he has so efficiently maintained and it has been hoped that he might be induced to remain. His counsels have been of conspicuous merit to the departed head of our nation and were such that every citizen might wish our present chief executive to have the benefit of them in the days to come. He is first of all a gentleman, a statesman and a close student of events.

MONSTER ENGINE HOUSE.

E. & M. Will Build One at Cambridge to Hold 150 Locomotives.

Just as you go into the Boston railroad yard at East Cambridge you will notice that a vast amount of clearing away has been done on the east side of the tracks. It is understood that an immense engine house is to be erected there, sufficiently large to accommodate all the Boston locomotives of the Boston & Maine road. There will be stalls for one hundred and fifty engines, which will compare well with any of the roundhouses of the country.

WHY HE LEFT MONASTERY.

William Gallinger Tells How He Ceased To Be Brother Leo of The Order of The Redemption.

Washington, Jan. 19.—William Gallinger, late Brother Leo of the Order of the Redemption, whose monastery is on the Hudson, and who is reported to be engaged to Miss Marie Waldworth of this city, was asked for the reasons which induced him to take up and then abandon the monastic life. He said: "I suppose you might call it one of those wild, foolish things that a young fellow does some times, such a trick as you would do, perhaps, I hardly know how it all came about myself. Through some very good friends of mine I met Father Paul, who is at the head of the society of the Redemption. We entered into a correspondence which was pleasant, and the outcome was that I went to pay him a visit at the monastery at Garrison. I was charmed with the place, charmed with the life. It was so different from the gay life in Washington, so quiet, so restful, I remained. Just how long I was there I did not know until I had left. I did not take any perpetual vows. I was, however, for the time being, a full brother of the order. There were but few of us. Since leaving I have heard nothing of the order and don't know whether it even exists now or not. I was convinced that it would not flourish because the purpose of the order as planned by Father Paul contemplated the amalgamation of the Anglican and Roman churches. I do not believe that this is possible, and I am not the only one who quit the order on account of this policy. How did I leave them? I should say I just packed up my things and came down to Washington. And here I am. I shall always have a tender remembrance for the days I passed at the garrison, but from now on it is William Gallinger of Washington." Mr. Gallinger will not discuss the matter of his reported engagement. Asked about it today, he said: "With regard to the reported engagement of Miss Waldworth and myself, I have absolutely nothing to say. Anything on the subject must come from the young woman herself."

A SKY FARM SPECIAL CAR.

There will be a special theatre car through to York Beach after the performance of Sky Farm at Music hall next Wednesday evening, as one of the largest parties of York theatre-goers for the season will be made up there and at Kittery Point. This performance will be a notable one in the season's list of excellent attractions.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

It is no wonder that McClure's magazine has made its way into thousands of new homes for 1902. There was never a better fiction number of any magazine than the January McClure's. And the February number promises to be its equal. It wouldn't be McClure's if it wouldn't. It is an elegant publication and it offers more this year than ever before. This is saying a great deal, but any recent number will convince one of the truth of this statement.

"The Flash of an Emerald," by Ethel Watts Mumford, the novelette with which the February number of The Smart Set opens, is a notable contribution to literature. It contains, in exquisite balance, realism, adventure and romance. The characters, most modern of the modern, are distinctive and drawn with charming art. The love interest that permeates the plot is at once novel and absorbing, while the scenes, varying from France to America, form an admirably worked-out background to action the most dramatic. In its entirety, as in details, the story is one that must win the praise of critic and public alike.

***
Are England, Scotland and Ireland destined, ultimately, to become a part of "The United States of America and Great Britain?" is the startling inquiry which William T. Stead makes in the January Cosmopolitan. He has been one of the prophets of Great Britain, and has, at all times, been able to see in advance of his contemporaries—as events have proven. He has been studying the new conditions brought about by the industrial combinations and reaches the conclusion that England and the United States are destined to be more closely united, and that as soon as the English people wake up to the absurdity and general uselessness, as has been shown in the Boer war, of a king and aristocracy, the trend will be immediate in the direction of a union with the people of the United States. How ever much one may differ from Mr. Stead, his speculations will be found vastly interesting. He is the first British subject who has had the courage to suggest such an outcome.

***
Miss Harriet E. Richards, secretary of the Massachusetts Audubon society expresses her strong admiration for Hezekiah Butterworth's new book, "The Days of Audubon," in the following letter: One of the most satisfactory books for boys that has been laid on my table recently is "The Days of Audubon," by Hezekiah Butterworth. The author vividly pictures the generous home life of our noble Audubon, his devoted wife, and faithful son. The chapter on Webster and Audubon is an inspiration. The book is full of incidents in the life of the heroic, high-minded man who loved the birds, the woods, and his home."

***
Appleton and company announce another edition of 5,000 of David Farrum. This is the eighty-sixth time that the book has been in press, and makes 522,000 copies placed on the market.

***
The Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York comes in for attention in the February Century, first with an illustrated article by Roger Riordan on "The Building of a Cathedral," with illustrations by Vanderboef, and second, with a paper by Bishop Potter on "The Uses of a Cathedral." The importance of the new cathedral is thus adequately set forth from both the architectural and religious points of view.

***
The February number of the Woman's Home Companion will contain a picturesque article on the great New Orleans Carnival of Mardi Gras. It will be superbly illustrated.

RALEIGH IS AT THIS STATION.

The navy department has under consideration the expansion of the course of instruction on board the U. S. S. Cincinnati, so as to embrace the training of water tenders and machinists for the engineers force of our ships of war.

It is possible, also, that the Raleigh, the sister ship of the Cincinnati, will be employed on the same duty. There is a very good reason for this in the fact that one-third of a ship's crew is included in the engine room and fire-room force and it is now agreed generally, that it pays to give some attention to the men on duty with the machinery and the furnaces. The Raleigh has the same machinery and boiler installation as the Cincinnati and is available for the same purpose of instruction. With two ships devoted to training from water tenders and machinists the navy ought to be in possession of the required skilled enlisted men in those important branches below decks.

SEA FOWL SHOOTING.

An Interesting Story of the Sport in This Vicinity. in the National Sportsman.

Up in the morning, before daylight, anywhere from one to three o'clock—the time depending on the distance one lives from the sea—down to the boats—out and set the decoys, securing in this way your berth—then you may come in and try to keep warm until light enough to put out for business.

This has been the daily program along the New England coast for the past two months, writes Mr. James I. Weston, of Exeter, in the January National Sportsman.

It is very severe these mornings (November), yet some of the native gunners still keep it up. A large number of fowl have been killed this season along the Maine and New Hampshire coast, from York Beach, Me., to Cape Ann—the main gunning points being at "The Nubble" (York Beach), Wallis Sands, Little Boar's Head (Rye Beach), North Beach (Fish Houses), Big Boar's Head, (Hampton Beach), and off the mouth of the Hampton river.

***
I have seen over twenty sea floats out to sea, off Big Boar's Head—in line—two gunshots apart.

First one on the scene in the morning has choice of berths. At Hampton I have known some gunners living three miles away to get up at midnight, walk to the Head, go out in the dark, put out their decoys, and then spend the time as best they could until it became light enough to see the birds.

Most of the native gunners shoot for the market, and they indeed earn what birds fall to their guns. Any city chap or inland gunner, unless he has been an annual visitor, and has made friends among these fellows, is up against a tough proposition; they call him a "highlander," and one or sometimes two mornings' shooting brings him long looked for visit to the sea to end.

To quote the Yellow Kid, "They don't let a thing to him." To be sure, one can use one of these traps to take him out and hold the boat up to the sea and wind, while he does the shooting, but no wise sportsman wishes to do that after season with two in the boat.

A clear, cold morning, with wind from the north, is generally an ideal one for a flight of loons and clappers, or cape-race. These birds come along singly or in pairs, and sometimes in what are called rafts, but never in flocks. The loon attains a very high rate of speed, sometimes of ninety miles an hour; the gunner has to lean his bird some three or four feet, while, lying at this rate, varying, of course, to the distance the loon is from the boat.

It generally takes a shot through the head or neck to make a clean kill. They carry off a wonderful amount of lead in the body.

A gunner seldom, if ever, fells a crippled loon, if they come to the water after having down some distance beyond the boat, they are no longer again.

***
"The Great American diver" can "cool 'em all, when in the water. If the "ripple has only a broken wing, in time it unites, and the bird can another season run the gamut.

It is a common sight to see many "ripples" about, during the shooting season, always just out of gunshot.

The loon, when killed stone dead, strikes the water with tremendous force. I can cite one instance at Hampton, where one coming head on at a high rate of speed, was killed instantly, and tipping downward, came directly for the boat; the gunner lunged, and the loon struck inside the boat, carrying away the boards from the oak bow brace—necessitating the rescue of the gunner from his perilous position. Some have argued that the clapper or cape-race is a young loon but this idea has been exploded.

It takes a loon some fifty or seventy five years to get out of the water and well on its way in flight. I saw one on this fall, killed at the "Nubble," that tipped the scales at fifteen pounds; this is the largest one I have ever seen or heard of.

The different varieties of coots, brant, etc., come in flocks, and generally to the decoys; the little gray coot is the most popular for table use.

The loon, however, is considered a treat to some of the natives, who cook them as they only can; but to the ordinary cook and to the "highlanders," the cooking of this bird is a problem they have not as yet solved. Fishy and tough is generally the result of their attempt.

At different times, gunners have been mystified at the disappearance of a dead bird, when rowing up to it. This was solved this fall by one of the Hampton gunners, who had shot down a loon, and rowing up to pick it out of the water, found only one wing in sight; grasping this, he slowly pulled to the surface a horrible-looking phiz—a fish called the "Munk"—all head—built after a porpoise or bulldog, on a large scale. Luckily within reach was a cod hook. He fast ened this into the side of the monster's mouth, and bringing the gunwhale of the boat, to the level of the water, rolled the fish aboard.

It weighed one hundred and twenty-five pounds; no scales, skin like that of an eel. It was taken ashore, placed upon the rocks, and its mouth propped open with a stick twelve inches in length, where it was viewed by the sportsmen, who were also open mouthed.

Sea-fowl pick hard, and when drawn and sold for thirty-five cents per pair, you can well imagine that the gunner is not getting rich.

When followed up, day after day, this mode of acquiring a livelihood is very hard work, to say nothing of the suffering from exposure to the cold and wet.

Pen-bore guns, weighing from eight and one-half to ten pounds, are most used; shells loaded with five or six drams of powder and one and one-half ounces of large shot mostly No. 2s.

Quite a few gunners of late, however, are using sixteen and twenty-gauge guns, with good results, at single birds.

Often two guns are taken in the boat, the heavy one for general shooting, and a light weight one for clappers.

Another thing that may be news to those interested in the shooting of sea fowl, is that it is an ascertained fact that the loon, in swimming under water, uses its wings as well as its feet.

NOTES FROM THE NEW SAHARA.

Over in Portsmouth several of the former liquor dealers have put in a large amount of soft stuff and are least paying their rent out of the proceeds, if nothing more.

People, however, are inclined to look askance at any such arrangement as this, being inclined to think it is a blind for a more profitable line of business.—Newburyport News.

A resident from Fodern, who has a nickname for a "hard cash" man, back of Littlefield, came to town yesterday afternoon and after making his usual round for an hour or two, announced that "Nathan's" was a "rip" —Nashua Press.

Several business men of Concord, who used to jointly run a bar located in the published statement that beer is being sold from a motor cart in that vicinity. "We are run up without money enough to buy a meat cart," said one.—Nashua Press.

The police visited several places in town last night in search of hot spots, but without avail. The officers of a temperance organization, who put a complaint against an establishment which is now to be closed, and which the said officers suspect of harboring liquor for the purpose of sale. The standing of the firm in question is such that police officers were very much surprised at the search but not at all at its result, which entirely cleared the establishment of any suspicion.—Concord Monitor.

PROFESSIONALS AT DARTMOUTH.

Varney and Uniac Barred From Base Ball for Coming Season.

Hanover, Jan. 20.—The athletic council, controlling all the athletes of Dartmouth College, met in college hall Saturday afternoon to act upon charges of professionalism preferred against two members of last year's baseball team.

It is the first movement made by the alumni members of the new council to keep college athletics pure, and it is determined that no semblance of professionalism shall be tolerated at Dartmouth. The charges made were sustained by the council, and as a result Lawrence D. Varney, '02, captain of the baseball team for the coming season, and Thomas V. Uniac, '04, one of the best second basemen who ever played on a Dartmouth team, have been suspended and will not play with the Dartmouth Varsity the coming season.

Varney was the college's favorite pitcher, who had three brought down to Brown and won many other victories for the college, and Uniac was becoming no less popular.

The charges (made two months ago) were to the effect that the two men played professional ball at Potsdam last summer in the New York state league.

The decision of the council has been justified until a full investigation of the facts could be made, and meanwhile the matter has aroused a great deal of interest and anxious speculation among the students.

The decision, which results in the suspension of the two men came yesterday afternoon and is known to but few, although recently the students have begun to realize that the baseball team would probably have to lose its best players.

VANITY OF AN EMPRESS.

Josephine Dearly Loved Her Gowns and Her Jewels.

It is a rare privilege to be allowed to peep at the mysteries of an empress' toilet, to ransack her wardrobes, with their treasures of costly gowns, to open her jewel casket and to gloat over gems that would purchase many a king's ransom, but when this empress is the most luxurious and picturesque woman of an extravagant age the temptation is too strong to resist, says The Golden Penny.

Such an empress was Josephine, in turn the spoiled darling and outcast wife of Napoleon I., whose star filled the social heaven of Europe for five years. Josephine was more than forty years old and had already exhausted all the arts of luxury when she was crowned empress in 1804. Her first beauty had long left her, and, it is said, she had practiced the fatal and fashionable art of enameling until the enamel would no longer retain its hold on her skin, but cracked and covered her with a constant layer of white powder.

For ordinary occasions her hairdresser was a M. Herbeault. "A magnificent creature in an embroidered costume, with a sword at his side," but for any important occasion M. Duplan, the most consummate artist in the world, was called in. M. Duplan's salary for these occasional services was 20,000 francs a year, increased later by Napoleon to 42,000 francs. These two unworldly artists designed for Josephine's benefit no less than a thousand new methods of hair-dressing, each adapted to the special circumstances in which it was worn.

Such as Josephine loved her hundreds of costly dresses, she loved her jewelry more and was never happier unless she was adding almost daily to her treasures. In a few short months she spent half a million francs on jewels, and her happiest hours at Malmaison were spent in spreading out her thousands of gems in the table before her and gazing over their dazzling charms.

Her extravagance was the cause of many tears and much upbraiding from Napoleon, who grew tired of paying for the many of them reaching almost a million francs. But in the end he usually succumbed to her pleading and persistence and would say to her: "Come, Josephine! Come, my little one! Come to your self, I will make it all right!" Poor, silly Josephine! Poor Napoleon!

Opposed to Slaves.

There is in the Mediterranean countries a widespread prejudice against artificial heat, and consequently not more than one house in six is ever heated during the winter time.

French Brides.

French brides frequently add either lilies or myrtle to the traditional orange blossoms for the wedding day.

A Feminine Stander.

The Chinese have a saying that is a once amusing and sarcastic. Referring to the smallness of the feet of the Chinese women, they say, "What the women have lost in their feet they have added to their tongues."

Softening Shoes.

Boots and shoes which have become hardened by water should be rubbed with paraffin oil, and they will become as soft and pliable as when new.

"Save the Child!"

That is the beautiful cry of every mother who sees her beloved child wasting and suffering by day, and at night, for the sake of medical aid and to his (her) relief. It is so weak, so lacking in tone, that there is no chance of ground.

One of the results of the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a pure vegetable medicine, is a strong, healthy child. Thousands of mothers testify to this. Frequently making a mother a strong, healthy child before being "Favorite Prescription," or "All my other children sickly, except this one, and I too."

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription." There is nothing "just as good" for women's ills.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Correspondence confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I am so thankful for what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for me," writes Mrs. John T. Smith, of Stearns, British Columbia. "I have been suffering from the long months of pregnancy and I have a big, strong baby and the best health of all my three, and it cured a disease which was taking away all my strength."

DYSPEPSIA

"For six years I was a victim of dyspepsia in its worst form. I could eat nothing but milk and cream, and at times my stomach would become so full that I could not even take a glass of water. I have steadily improved until I am as well as I ever was in my life."

MONDAY, JAN. 20, 1902.

Captain Coghlin will not be called upon to recite "Hoch der Kaiser" for the entertainment of Prince Henry.

Governor Shaw's pardon list would indicate that he is a man who believes in doing things thoroughly.

Senator Foraker and Senator Hanna are both too shrewd to start in on an avowed campaign of mutual annihilation.

There is no disposition to interrupt the missionary work that Miss Stone may be doing among the Bulgarians by raising a ransom or sending a warship.

Mr. Perry Belmont behaves very much like a man who expects to be out with another challenge at the earliest opportunity.

A big pool of ocean liners is being formed. Possibly the steamship companies will agree not to carry any more anarchists to this country.

Andrew Carnegie says there is nothing in wealth beyond a competence. And after he had had all this fun giving away millions! Hoot, mon!

Before being allowed to come to this country, Aguinaldo should be compelled to state whether he has any idea of letting himself become a pink tea.

Admiral Schley has gone to hunt deer in Georgia. So long as its prominent men can retain their peace of mind sufficiently to go hunting or fishing now and then, the country may be regarded as safe.

Senator Platt is represented as the earnest advocate of a new healing process. It would be sad to find him descending from a bossship to the easily won fame of the man who gives patent medicine endorsements.

Mr. Schwab is indignant at the publicity given his visit to Monte Carlo, and the sensational stories concerning his playing. Mr. Schwab forgets that a man with his wealth and responsibilities is under constant observation.

The King of England says: "The war may now be regarded as approaching its conclusion." The remark is noteworthy for its profound caution. In fact, it may be applied not merely to the Boer war, but to everything under the sun.

Professor Triggs has discovered that George Washington was a great prose writer. If he keeps busy enough something of interest may be discovered about Professor Triggs. Every town has its specially noted days, and Chicago is evidently determined to become as fully recognized as headquarters for literary opinions as St. Louis is recognized as the great American depot for mules, says the Washington Star.

The balance on the wrong side of the ledger of the late Buffalo Pan-American exposition is now definitely stated to be $3,326,114.69. The causes of this deficiency are generally conceded to be partly because the show was not open for a long time after the date announced for it, but more largely because its attractions were advertised in the job printing offices of Buffalo. Instead of in the newspapers of the country. The managers of the St. Louis enterprise will do well to make a note of these two points.

We are in full sympathy with the object advocated by the New Orleans Times-Democrat, the development of the navy yards, the construction of some of our naval vessels therein, and thus permit labor to realize the benefits of the eight-hour law and other acts of congress. But we do not approve the method of advocacy adopted by the Times-Democrat, this great end will not be attained by attacks upon the honorable secretary of the navy and the naval committees. Rather let us convince them of the error into which they have fallen. More than a dozen years ago a feeble attempt was made to construct vessels in two of our then poorly-equipped navy yards. They had at that time absolutely no experience in the construction of steel vessels, and they were hampered by systems of labor employment and the purchase of materials, which, if the reports of the navy department are reliable, have since been vastly improved. The opponents of the laboring man and the navy yards now compare the cost and the time to construct vessels under such conditions with the most recent product of the highly-protected and highly-developed shipyards of the present day, yards complete with the most recent equipments, and with an experience and system built up during a decade of the government's training care and persistent support and forthwith because these ships of a dozen years ago cost more than the most recent product of labor-saving devices, it is decreed that the navy yards shall not try again. They are to have no change unless a combination of shipbuilders could run the place up to a figure in excess of that of 1900. There is every reason to believe that if a portion of the work was put in the navy yards both the cost and the time of construction would prove satisfactory. It is unnecessary to continue a building policy steadily for a few years until the equipment and the experience acquired. The naval constructors who would be in charge of such work and who are a unit in favor of it, have added largely in devising the methods which have produced the present condition of efficiency in the private yards, and they are fully competent to introduce equal or better methods in the navy yards. In the English navy where many more than one half of all the ships, large and small, have been built in the private yards, it was found when steel construction was first started on a large scale that the public work cost somewhat more than contract work. But in less than half a dozen years this condition was reversed, and the public construction cost less money and took less time than did contract work, and it became the standard of quality and design for all naval work in the country. Today the British admiralty are using their dock on all classes of work to their full capacity. It is a most unusual experience for a new business to pay dividends in the first months of a year of its operation. It is a common expectation that the cost of production will be lessened as the equipment is improved and experience gained. But when we turn to the navy yards some profess to believe that the first ship produced under most unfavorable conditions sets a standard of price that by no chance can be reduced in further construction. The Times-Democrat is quite right in the statement that the American navy will never be built, meaning that it never will be completed. There will always be work for the navy yards. The fleet cannot be efficient without efficient navy yards behind it. After the short and glorious but by no means severe Spanish war, it required all our yards more than a year to put in good condition the ships which had scarcely been but a shell. What will happen in a really severe and protracted naval war with the much larger fleet now in existence and building unless our yards are developed and ready instantly to refit a damaged ship and return her to the fighting line. Efficient yards add enormously to our fighting strength. If instant and immediate economy is the only thing to be sought why not purchase a job lot of ships abroad at the lowest figure possible and be done with the whole matter. We believe that when the people understand this question they will insist on a proper and equitable division of work between the contractors and the navy yards, the greatest development possible of all resources, and the faithful observance of the pledges to labor, and that we shall no longer see congress promise the working man an eight-hour day and straightway close the navy yards and leave him to make the best bargain possible through strikes and lockouts with the contractors to whom all shipbuilding has been intrusted.

THE HOAR RESOLUTION.

Mr. Hoar, as appears from his speech explaining his Philippine resolution, has in mind the re-opening of the whole Philippine question. He would go back to the beginning, and investigate every charge that has been lodged against his countrymen in their dealings with the Filipinos since Dewey began preparations at Hong Kong to "capture or destroy the Spanish fleet." He seems to be convinced himself that his countrymen are in the wrong, and he desires a record made up which will fix that view of the matter firmly in history.

There are two wings of the anti-imperialist contingent. One is led by Mr. Hoar, and as just stated, it represents the proposition that the Filipinos are the right of the contention. Aguinaldo—busy at the time taking messages by wireless telegraphy from liberty—was ticked by Dewey and others, and, driven by a sense of honor, received took the field against the American forces. The red sparrow, formerly shown near Hawthorn Rock off Goodwins Point, below South Gloucester, has been discontinued. (U. S. B. The investigation, if ordered, will fail of its purpose. Now that the heat of the original controversy has in so many quarters cooled it is impossible for even his most enthusiastic American admirers to invest Aguinaldo with the virtues of George Washington. That Asiatic mountebank stands of pretty accurately measured today. A shrewd and an unscrupulous schemer; laying wires at one time for an uprising which would place the knife of the assassin at the throat of every American in Manila, and at another time planning and executing the assassination of one of his principal lieutenants whom he suspected of disloyalty, he has wound up in jail, and, according to all accounts, is a contented prisoner through fear that if released he might be assassinated himself by some of his followers. If there is anything of the spirit of George Washington in that fellow it escapes the average American appreciation. Still, if the senate is disposed to indulge Mr. Hoar there is enough humor in the country to follow with some interest the effort to crown an oriental adventurer with a wreath of glory.—Washington Star.

FOOD NOT ALL

Food is not all the thin man needs. Maybe he's sick. You can't make him eat by bringing him food. But Scott's Emulsion can make him eat. That Emulsion gives a man appetite and feeds him both. It brings back lost flesh.

No trouble about digestion. The weakest stomach can digest Scott's Emulsion. It tastes good, too. Scott's Emulsion paves the way for other food. When wasted and weakened by long illness it gives strength and appetite that ordinary food cannot give. Not only food—medicine, too—Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil.

We'll send you a little to try if you like. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 West Street, New York.

NEW HAMPSHIRE AT ST. LOUIS.

Within a comparatively short time it must be decided whether or not New Hampshire is to be represented at the St. Louis exposition, and if she is represented, what form her contribution to the fair will take? There were a good many complaints, reasonable and unreasonable, of the poor showing which New Hampshire made at Buffalo, and it seemed to many that New Hampshire made a mistake in following too closely the usual methods of calling attention to a state and its advantages. It is their argument that the world takes very little interest in New Hampshire as a farming or a manufacturing state, but that the world is interested in New Hampshire as a resort, and would like to know more about the attraction she can offer the traveler. It has been suggested that New Hampshire should send to St. Louis what the people who visit the exposition will be most interested in. Anything, in fact, which would tend to impress them with the beauties and natural advantages of the state, rather than examples of the products of human ingenuity or industry. Expositions are full of such things, and people get tired looking at them if they take the trouble to look at all. New Hampshire might have an original and unique "exhibit" at the exposition, and there is good reason to believe that it would be worth the cost, which would very likely be less than one of the conventional kind. There are great possibilities in the idea and it is worth considering. Along the line suggested New Hampshire could compare favorably with any other state, while many other states can easily outdo her in the display of things found at fairs.—Manchester Union.

M. J. GRIFFIN

He told me that he had a furnace. The cold will not concern us."

He smiled a gleeful smile and then went on: "The man who sold it, asked me that no residence could be too big to hold it."

"Because, when once 'twas firmly set, Or, maybe, when 'twas seated, The furnace all around 'Would be completely heated."

Listen how the furnace had The fierceness of Nero. It simply dropped its head and quit. When things got down to zero.

At 2 in the morning, when The kids were all arising, The cold air from the furnace poured In manner frigidizing.

At 6 o'clock old Fidd went down And made the chimneys scamp; He shoveled on a lot of coal And opened up the damper.

At 9 o'clock a feeble blaze Did in the chimneys smolder. At 10 o'clock, if anything, The house was somewhat colder.

Eleven brought a shivering whiff Of heat that was right pleasing. But noon was still disconsolate, And everything was freezing.

At 1 p. m. old Fidd went down And cut it at and said it. At 2 and 3 and 4 o'clock And 5 o'clock he coaled it.

At 6 the family sat down To eat a chilly dinner. At 7 Fidd was saying things That would disgrace a sinner.

At 8 he thought of how he bought The furnace with much haggling; At 9 his daughter went to bed To slumber in her region.

At 10 there came a blast of heat From radiators pouring; Eleven saw it hotter yet And shivering the flooring.

Eleven-thirty found the warmth With vigor unabated; Old Fidd threw open windows then, And things were ventilated.

By midnight there were smoke and flames From out the cellar swelling. And 1 a. m. their little home Was but a razed dwelling.

But Fidd was glad. He said the heat Forwarded all his labors. He got a good insurance sum And warmed up all his neighbors.

which is in the heart of the Russian Jewish ghetto of Chicago. She had seen better days, but not during the many years she lived in this neighborhood, says Chitzy.

She lived in a room for which she paid $2 a month. She earned her living by washing and other odd jobs. But she was 88 years of age.

She was taken with pneumonia, and the glass of hot lemonade which a neighbor brought her did not suffice. She died in the ambulance on her way to the County hospital. In her little room there was nothing found but a well worn Yiddish Bible and one old dress. Before she started she gave her last 25 cents to a little child, the hands of many pennies that her shrunken hands had placed in the hands of the dreary, weary little children of the neighborhood who had learned to love her. Her death was followed by a public movement among the children of Bunker street. They massed their pennies; they solicited from door to door. They tried to raise money enough to bury Mother Cohen in some other place than the potter's field. In this they failed, but they raised money enough to buy her a shroud more elegant than any robe she had worn in life, and the plain pine coffin had flowers on it. One of her little pensioners broke his bank and found $2.50 in it. He invested it all in violets for Mother Cohen's coffin. Chicago has had another "queen's burial."

It is a Pity.

It has always seemed a pity that women should ever be obliged to compete with men, because I think they are unfitted mentally and physically by what we call their womanly nature.

So far as I am concerned, I would like to see every woman protected and cared for in her home, and I always feel sorry for a woman who has to go out into the world to compete with the sterner sex.

I think that we need help from men, and I think it a grave responsibility resting upon their shoulders that they set us the best of examples in virtue, morality, indulgence and pleasure.

This example women must have, and they must look to the stronger sex for it.

There is no man, no matter how he may have dissipated his life, health or opportunities, but respects modesty, gentleness and womanliness in woman.

For our womanliness is our all, always has been and always will be.

Hence the womanly woman, in my opinion, is not doomed.—Mme. Lilian Nordica Doeme.

A Woman's Club Study.

The Colonial club of Keene, N. H., believes in doing well what it undertakes. It grew out of a university extension class and was formed for the express purpose of studying colonial history, following a suggestion from Mr. John Piske that a close study of this subject was beneficial to every American. The topic has been prepared according to an exhaustive plan, under which the club is now finishing its sixth year. It is probably one of the most thorough and complete courses in American history undertaken by any club in this country. For the last four years the club has offered a yearly prize of $10 for the best essay on some topic of American history, the prize to be competed for by the members of the senior and junior classes of the Keene high school.

Her New Name.

Considerable doubt exists in many people's minds as to the proper way in which to address the charming lady who has made one of the greatest reputations among the women writers of the century under the style of "Frances Hodgson Burnett." Her books of course continue to bear the familiar imprint. That name on the title page is worth a couple of thousand pounds. But that is not the name which appears on her visiting cards. When she married Mr. Townsend a year or two back, she elected to retain the "Hodgson" on her cards, which are accordingly engraved Mrs. Hodgson Townsend.

Mrs. Lorillard, Jr., a Socialist.

Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Jr., is now at Nice, spending most of her time with Mme. Severine, the distinguished journalist and philanthropist, whose acquaintance is sought after by those who have become enthusiastic over her writings. The millionaire's wife, it is rumored, now declares herself an absolutely converted socialist and will under Mme. Severine's guidance devote her wealth and influence to promoting socialism among society women. Another of her plans is to erect an immense sanitarium at some chosen spot on the Riviera for consumptive American women who could not afford to go and stay there.

Novel Salad Sandwiches.

At a recent afternoon tea some novel salad sandwiches were served. They were from tall, narrow biscuits a day old, from which the centers were removed nearly to the bottom with a sharp, round apple corer, leaving a little well. This well was filled with chicken salad cut fine, and the little round crust top was fitted into the biscuit like the top of a pate case, making the biscuit appear whole, while a delicious surprise was hidden within.—Good Housekeeping.

A Snoring Child.

Snoring is a symptom that should not be neglected in children. It shows that there is some obstruction to the free passage of air from the nose to the throat. The tonsils may be enlarged and so partially close the passage at its lower opening. There may be a polypus or some small tumor in the nasal passage itself or catarrh of the throat or nose or both. A physician should be consulted.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Salted Him Perfectly.

He kissed her suddenly. "Well, I like that!" she cried.

"So do I," he answered calmly. And she let it go at that.

Being.

Being may be whitened by the use of lemon juice, given a pink tint by using strawberry or cranberry juice or yellow by using the grated rind of an orange strained through a cloth.

The First Directory.

Philadelphia was the first city to issue a directory. Its first edition coming out in the year 1755.

Kentucky Roads.

Kentucky was one of the early western states to take an active interest in roadmaking. It was the policy of the state to co-operate with its minor political divisions in the construction of roads, and many years ago a corps of engineers set to work to lay off roads in all parts of the Blue Grass State.

The Alps.

The Alps cover a space of 90,000 square miles. In them rivers have their source flowing into the North sea, Black sea and Mediterranean.

Tools in the House.

Expense, inconvenience and nervous irritation can be saved by having in the house a few tools such as are used in doing what may be called "small jobs," provided their possession is accompanied by some knowledge of how to use them.

Citizenship.

A person born in this country of alien parents may follow the nationality of his birthplace and call himself an American without naturalization or he may follow that of his parents and be a foreigner.

Our First Glass.

The first glass made in this country was manufactured in Jamestown by the English colonists in 1609.

Inside a Shark.

A Vienna journal says that a shark was lately caught at Lukore which measured five and a half meters and weighed 3,000 kilograms. In its stomach were found, among other things, a pair of trousers, a cow bell and a shoe.

Visitors to Italy.

Italy's income from foreign visitors is estimated at $40,000,000 a year.

Lime.

Lime is an excellent absorbent of moisture and is rapidly fatal to germ life. It has a wide range of usefulness both indoors and out. It is a valuable deodorizer as well as an antiseptic.

Ice and Steel.

The friction of steel on ice is exactly half that of ice on ice.

Peanuts and Alcohol.

Peanuts have the faculty of absorbing alcohol and preventing it from demoralizing the nerves and upsetting the thinking machine, without entirely nullifying its exhilarating effects. The large proportion of oil in the peanuts accounts for this result. A good wine-glass of olive oil has the same effect.

Lemons.

Lemons should be kept in water until they are wanted for use, and the skin will not only be kept from hardening, but their flavor will be improved.

Tobacco.

The world's tobacco crop of $50,000,000 is grown on 2,250,000 acres of land.

Balti's Houses.

Insurance companies refuse to insure houses in Haiti because of the tinder-like character the wood assumes in that climate.

Celery.

To revive limp celery, put it into boiling water for a second or so and then into a bowl of cold water, allowing the water to run on it for some time. This will make it quite fresh and crisp for the table.

Robert Burns' Lovers.

Burns' cottage at Alloway and the adjoining monument on the banks of Doon attract annually a larger number of visitors than does any other literary shrine in the United Kingdom.

School Lunches.

In packing the school lunch never put warm food in a tight pail or box.

Onions Under Water.

When preparing onions for cooking, it will be found much more comfortable work if they are peeled or sliced under water. Hold in the lap a large bowl filled with clear water, and work with the hands under the water. Onions handled in this way will not cause tears or stained fingers.

Calcutta University.

The University of Calcutta is said to be the largest educational corporation in the world. Every year it examines over 10,000 students.

Sensitive.

A country postman in Belgium was so overcome with grief and shame at missing the mail train that he went straight from the station to the nearest water and drowned himself.

FUR HIGH LICENSE.

All the State Aroused Over the Important Question.

The advocates of a high license in this state will soon have a chance to get to work in a systematic manner, says the Manchester Union. A movement is already on foot looking to a vigorous campaign with the hope that the next session of the New Hampshire legislature will repeal the prohibitory statute and in its place enact a license law that will be a benefit to the whole state.
Some of the most influential business men of Manchester with extensive interests in Manchester have already consulted in reference to the best means of commencing and sustaining a thorough campaign for a license law. Leading attorneys are to be consulted and it is expected that within a fortnight the first steps toward perfecting a thorough organization of the license forces will be taken.
The movement is to be far reaching and will look to the extension of the organization to all the cities and towns in the state. Various plans and schemes have already been discussed and it is believed that one now under consideration will soon be put into execution. The best of legal talent is to be consulted and the campaign will be conducted on the most approved lines.
Those behind this movement are among the best known business men of that city and they will leave no stone unturned to bring about an organization which will eclipse all previous movements known in the state.
The bill will be omitted and the organization is planned to be the most successful results ever seen in this state.
The organization is completed and the work will be pushed out in the state and strenuous efforts will be made to create effective branches in every city and town in New Hampshire.
The men behind the scenes are working each day, discussing plans and completing arrangements for the first steps, and it is confidently believed that two weeks will see the organization well started.

POLICE AFTER KELLEY.

Missing Exeter Team Found by the Police at Dover.

A fellow named Kelley hired a team from Jerry Flynn's livery stable in Exeter Saturday noon for a couple of hours as he said. At six o'clock the team had not returned, and Mr. Flynn notified the authorities there and in Portsmouth.
The Dover officers located the team Sunday night at Nan Harvey's stable in Dover. Kelley drove from Exeter to Portsmouth, and thence to Dover Saturday evening where he put the team in Mr. Harvey's stable. He then went to the Broadway hotel and stopped there over night, leaving Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with word that he would return at noon. He has not yet returned.
The police are looking for the fellow and express hopes of apprehending him soon.

FANCY.

(Written for the Herald.)
Bright Fancy to thy mystic bowers,
I fly in lone and dreary hours,
Casting awhile from Memory's sway,
The earth-born cares, that crowd my way.

No distance parts us; space and time
Are banished from that fairy clime,
I breathe a wish to see thy face,
And I am clasped in thine embrace.

Enchantment dwells within thine arms,
Resistless are thy winning charms,
Vain are thy feeble powers to tell,
The beauty of thy magic spell.

The sadness, gloom and anxious fears,
The pensive mood my spirit wears,
Thou can dispel with magic hand,
And lead me into Fairy Land.

With skies so bright, and flowers so fair,
And lordly castles built in air,
Not all the proudest sage may say,
Shall turn my raptured eyes away.

From troubles born of earthly woes,
From treacherous friends, from bitter foes,
Mr weary spirit finds repose,
In Fancy's bowers of rest and peace.
S. L. L.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

The U. S. Civil Service commission will hold examinations at several places in each state during March and April, to secure young men and women for government service. 9,889 persons secured positions last year through these examinations. Probably 10,000 appointments will be made this year. All appointments are for life and for most positions only a common school education is required. Salaries at appointment vary from $600 to $1,200 a year with liberal promotions afterwards. Politics is not considered. This affords a good opportunity for people between sixteen and forty-five years of age. Those desiring places of this kind can get full information about them, free, by writing to the Columbian Correspondence College, Washington, D. C., and asking for its civil service catalogue, number three.

RING OUT YE BELLS.

The police have received a number of complaints this winter regarding team owners and drivers who have violated the city ordinances by driving without sleighbells. No prosecutions have yet been made as it has been thought that the neglect was due to forgetfulness rather than any inclination to evade the law, but the complaints are becoming so numerous that the police will probably have to put a few offenders into court to impress teamsters in general with the fact that they must obey the law or take the consequences.

PUTTING IN GUNS.

W. P. Robinson, contractor for putting in the emplacements at Jerry's Point, New Castle, for the six twelve-inch guns to be installed there for the defense of this harbor, is engaged in doing whatever preliminary work can be done during the winter. Only a few men will be employed until the middle or last of March, but then several hundred will be put on and kept at work until the ground freezes again next fall. It is thought the job will take about a year to complete, and that the guns cannot be made ready for action before some time in 1903.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Rev. Treadwell Walden of Cambridge, Mass., officiated at the services at St. John's church on Sunday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Henry E. Hovey. Rev. C. A. Morrill of this city will conduct the services next Sunday, Jan. 26.

A RUNAWAY BOY.

Arthur Turner of Rochester Had Been Away From Home a Week.

On Saturday evening one of the night patrolmen picked up a twelve year old youngster who was wandering aimlessly having no place to go. At the station house he gave the name of Arthur Turner and said that he had left his sister's home in Rochester over a week ago and had spent most of the intervening time in Newburyport, Mass. He had no parents and made his home with his sister. He was sent to the Children's Home over night and on Sunday morning was provided with a ticket and placed on board the train for Rochester.

AT THE NAVY YARD.

The new locomotive still remains on the flat car on which it arrived. Clerks have been taking account of stock on hand at the store houses. Engineers are at work on the plans for the new office building which is to be erected in the spring on a site near the electric light station.
The Holly pond water has been turned on in the pipes and the hydrants given a test, and the system is reported to work to much satisfaction.
A large gang of workmen are engaged in cutting and storing the ice from the pond on Seavey's island. They were compelled to work Sunday in order to get the pond clear of ice before a storm. The ice is a good crop and as clear as crystal.
A large brass propeller is to be made in the foundry of the steam engineering department for the U. S. S. Dalgren.
Many of the remaining carrier pigeons have been disposed of by sale.
The steam engineering buildings are being piped for heating from the steam from the electric plant.
The new hours for the mechanics and laborers went into effect today.
Next Saturday will be pay day for the workmen.
The work of the yard and docks crew is an up and down affair.
Most of the men connected with the fire department on the yard hope that a new system for fire alarms will soon be installed.
Not all of the workmen are pleased with the new hours and it will certainly be hard on the smokers who enjoy a puff at noon.
The iron foundry on Seavey's is and is very busy on the castings on engine cylinders.
The shed now occupied by the granite cutters is located on the site of the proposed new machine shop.

There will be an offering taken up for choir expenses.

PAY YOUR MONEY AND TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

The temperance people point with pride to the fact that not an arrest for drunkenness was recorded at the police station throughout last week and say that it is significant. On the other hand, those who are not in sympathy with the closing of the saloons say that the fact has nothing to do with the full in police circles and that more liquor was sold in Portsmouth last week than in any six days in the city's history.

VERY MUCH IMPROVED.

Hon. Frank Jones was able to be at dinner with his family on Sunday and appeared stronger and cheerful. Mr. Jones continues to improve daily and is well on the road to recovery.
